Sen. Crowell Meets with AARP Representatives

JEFFERSON CITY— Sen. Jason Crowell (R-Cape Girardeau) on March 27, 2007, welcomed to the Capitol local representatives of the AARP. The Missouri Chapter of AARP is the leading nonprofit, nonpartisan membership organization for citizens over the age of 50 in the State of Missouri.

Those visiting Sen. Crowell in Jefferson City were Ilena Aslin of Cape Girardeau, Laverne Nothdurft of Whitewater, Carolyn Kaskavitch of Piedmont and Tom Wiginton of Jackson.

“I appreciate those who came to Jefferson City and visited my office to advocate for AARP and all of those that they represent,” Sen. Crowell said. “The people involved with this association who come to share their positions on issues that are being discussed in Jefferson City are vital in letting legislators know where the entire membership of AARP stands. With a membership of over 50 million citizens the voice of AARP is strong and well respected.”

The Missouri Chapter of AARP rallied in Jefferson City to advocate for healthcare options of its members within the new MO HealthNet program.
