JEFFERSON CITY — With a priority to make sure all St. Louis citizens have access to and are aware of local services available, the office of Sen. Joe Keaveny, D-St. Louis, is providing a community services directory for 2011 with contact information for St. Louis establishments.

The directory contains contact information for programs offering:

- Educational opportunities

- Abuse and stress hotlines
- Support groups, including health and mental health resources
- Employment offices
- Housing and neighborhood assistance
- Contact information for elected officials and state departments

“I hope this directory will be of assistance to all St. Louis citizens who are in need of local services,” said Sen. Keaveny. “There are multiple government agencies and non-profit organizations that offer support services free of charge.”

The community services directory is available on Sen. Keaveny’s website at www.senate.mo.gov/keaveny. For those without Internet access, the directory is available through mail order. For further inquiries, contact the office of Sen. Keaveny at (573) 751-3599.
