Autism Awareness Month

Focusing on Helping those with Autism

April is Autism Awareness Month and in this week's video, I highlight many of the accomplishments Missouri has made in treating this disorder. And as the number of children with autism continues to increase, making sure that research and treatment is available for those with autism-related disorders in Missouri is an important priority.

I hope during this month, you will join me in taking time to reflect on the families in our community who spend every day dealing with autism. By working together to make sure progress is made in the research and treatment of autism, we can continue to make tomorrow better than today.
